Promoting a Christian Agenda for the End Times

OSUN HIJAB AGENDA RUNS INTO TERMINAL HITCH

As we wrote recently, the Islamic mujahedeen, desperate to change the equation of influence in the educational sector in Osun state of Nigeria are pushing the wearing of the hijab to school as a matter of religious duty for their young girls.

Of course, the school re-classification policy, could not change the history, character, or influence of schools founded by Christian missions decades ago, as die-hard Islamists would love to see happen. So, against all reason and logic, the idea was first touted that the government should provide school uniforms, the same uniform, for all public schools in the state. The expected next step of providing different Shariah-compliant uniforms for muslim students was however not that easy to implement. Not only are students from different schools now no longer identifiable by their uniforms, the next step will sharply identify students purely as either moslem or non-moslem. Even the don't-bloody-care government of the day couldn't just go that far.

And so, the goal of eroding the significant influence of Christian mission schools in Osun State remains unachievable. Desperate that the tenure of their champion is winding up, the Islamists are throwing caution to the winds and moving on anyway.

The dress-rehearsal was carried out at the Baptist High School, Ejigbo, where the principal and some teachers were beaten to a pulp, allegedly because of their opposition to the wearing of the hijab by female moslem students. → pg 2

Scotland requires state-appointed guardian for every child; Britain to jail parents for possible "emotional cruelty" to their children

The moves to recruiting the next generation, children, for mass indoctrination into New World Order ideas continue relentlessly as the endtime clock approaches midnight.

On the 19th of February, 2014, the Scottish National Parliament debated and passed a Bill which ostensibly seeks to ensure that all of Scotland's parents are properly qualified to care for their children, purportedly to protect the "rights" of those children. According to the Children and Young People \(Scotland\) Bill, the National Health Service for Scotland will appoint a health worker to act as a "named person" for every child up until five years of age. Thereafter, the responsibility is passed to councils until the child reaches 18. The "named person" is empowered to have legal access to information about a child and his family from law enforcement and health authorities. Arabs clamour for Jew-free Palestinian State, but it is Israel that gets labeled "apartheid"

America is not hiding its deep commitment to ensuring that a Peace Treaty is signed between Israel and her apparently implacable Arab neighbours as soon as possible. And with mounting economic threats, including boycotts and divestment led by the EU, Israel has found herself needing to bend over backward to consider proposals once considered absolutely unthinkable.

One such proposal, the land swap deal, calls for "the transfer of the predominantly Arab "Triangle" of communities and Wadi Ara, a main artery between central and northern Israel bordering the West Bank, in return for Jewish settlements in the West Bank." Eager to demonstrate goodwill towards the peace efforts, Israel, through her Foreign Minister Avigdor Lieberman, is now conceding there is nothing fundamentally wrong with such an idea for land swap. (<http://www.ynetnews.com/home/0,7340,L-3082,00.html>)

But there is a huge problem on the Arab side of the equation. First, there is almost 100% → turn over agreement among the Arabs both within and outside Palestine, that no Jew could become citizens in the proposed Palestinian state. If the land swap deal is to fall through then, the Jews would have to return to Israel. While the Jews concerned would probably actually prefer that option, Arabs currently living in Israel as Israeli citizens would not hear of a reciprocal return by them to the new Palestinian state when created.

Avigdor Lieberman had expressed his opinion that the Palestinians would want to embrace that option. As he reasoned: "They define themselves as Palestinians, ,,,,so why wouldn't they join their Palestinian brothers?"

But the Arab Israeli's have their "why not". The bottom-line is they are not ready to exchange the high quality of life and liberty offered by Israel for the deadly in-fighting and poverty promised by the proposed Palestinian State. There are finer ways of expressing that however. For instance, according to Revia Mahajna, an attorney from the village Musmus in the Wadi Ara region:

"From an historical perspective, I'm living on Palestinian land that was passed down from father to son way before the State of Israel was established, and on the other hand I have an Israeli identification card," he said. "I'm a Palestinian living in the State of Israel just like there are Palestinians living in Canada or Germany."

Where the situation becomes absolutely incomprehensible however, is that even while the Arabs want a Palestinian state that is free of Jewish presence, they at the same time insist that they cannot accept Israel being even nominally recognized as a Jewish homeland! And absolutely amazingly, the EU and her allies are insisting that Israel is the one at fault and should be labeled an apartheid state and boycotted economically! (see Arab League 'categorically' refuses to recognize Israel as Jewish state).

Despite all these intrigues, the Bible is clear that a peace treaty will indeed be signed in the Middle East between Israel and her Arab neighbours. This end-time treaty will be brokered by the antichrist, and will be for a period of 7 years (Daniel 9:27). Real Christians may not be around to witness the Treaty as it could have been preceded by the Rapture.

Hijab in Osun Schools (from Front page)

As it became evident soon after, the alleged assault on a hijab-wearing moslem girl was a pure concoction by the Islamists. It never took place. Thereafter the real action commenced at yet another Baptist School, the Baptist High School at Iwo – the hotbed of Shariah militancy, probably in the entire South West Nigeria.

We had drawn the attention of our readers to an earlier script by the Shariah advocates, before the show of shame at Ejigbo. In the major article intended to usher in the hijab into public schools in Osun state, Prof Ishaq Akintola from Lagos state University, had alleged that Christian teachers were physically assaulting moslem girls on the streets of Iwo, simply for dressing in the hijab. Like we pointed out, that would be extremely absurd, as virtually every moslem lady in the town dresses in the hijab/purdah, irrespective of weather condition or the time of the day or night. What would be new in a school girl donning the hijab on the streets of Iwo, and what would be the problem of any Christian teacher with that?

The script was thereafter changed to situate the imaginary assault in Ejigbo.

With the following severe beating dealt on Mr Layi Oguntola at Ejigbo, the mujahedeen were sure no Principal would dare complain when they instructed their girls to come to school at Iwo, donned in their hijabs. As the Osun chapter of the Christian Association of Nigeria (CAN) would insist, this was with the tacit support of the state government.

What the Islamists did not bargain for however, was a scenario where the Christians completely ignore the hijab donning Islamist girls. Rather, the CAN simply gave leave to Christian girls to also feel free to turn up in their religious clothing, such as choir robes, worn over their standard uniforms. Soon after, students practicing traditional religions also decided they could come to school in their own various regalia, including some masquerades! The argument of the Islamists has now gone round full circle: yes, it is the right of pupils to come to school in garbs reflecting their religious persuasions. But such right certainly could not be limited to muslim girls!

The government's initial attempt to intimidate the parents of Christian pupils who came in the unconventional garb has been rebuffed by the CAN who accepted responsibility for the dressing of the pupils and directed that the parents should not honour government's invitation to discuss the matter.

So we wait to see what the government of Ogbeni Aregbesola would do next, as he is obviously so scared of calling his Islamic base to order. Are we witnessing the last days of the advocacy for hijab in Osun public schools?

For related furor concerning the change in name of the famous Ilesa Grammar School (founded 1934) to Ilesa High School in the spirit of the Aregbesola's re-classification programme, see (Alumni kick against plan to change school name, Punch Feb 7, 2014, pg 43)

Of Extraterrestrials, Nephilims and Cyborgs

The Vatican continues to keep the subject of extraterrestrial life alive as it again convened in March, a major conference bringing together 200 of the leading astrobiologists in the world. The Vatican Observatory itself is one of the major players in the search for extraterrestrial aliens.

www.prophecynewswatch.com/2014/April01/012.html

Some people however think we do not have to look out to outer space to discover aliens and their influences. They hold that certain monuments found on earth, for instance, required superior technology that is alien to the planet - especially at the time those monuments were erected. A prime example of this is the Grand Pyramid at Giza, which requires such fine technical skills and knowledge that it is said that even today's modern man, with all the technology at his disposal, would find it challenging building one. There are also the crop circles, which are patterns formed on agricultural farms on earth but which makes sense only when viewed from space. How could such fantastic images be formed without their being supervised from space? (For more, check through the many sites for "unexplained mysteries of the world", e.g www.topsixlist.com)

Hence the conclusion that aliens from space visited the earth and directed these things! This theory fits in squarely with the Yoruba mythology of 'gods' descending from the skies from a chain at Ile-Ife. More western members of the extraterrestrial brotherhood put the story only slightly differently, doing so by applying some bizarre idiotic private interpretations to the Bible. For instance, one Rosicrucian literature alleges that the Lord Jesus was actually an alien from planet Mars; while many UFOlogists will swear that Elijah's going to heaven in a chariot of fire was a classic UFO abduction! Sigh!

Apart from the Vatican, former US President, Bill Clinton is another authority figure trying to revive interest in the existence of extraterrestrial aliens. He is quoted in a recent statement as saying that while he had not found any evidence that aliens exist, (from the secret files he was privileged to review while in office as US President), he nevertheless would not be shocked if extraterrestrials should pop up on planet earth one day. Is that meant to be some "read-my-lips" stuff?

Of course, well-grounded Christians have a clear world-view that cannot be muddled up by some extra-terrestrial myths. For crying out loud, the Bible makes it abundantly clear that intelligent life-forms abound outside the planet. Among the myriads described in the Bible are angels and plain devils! (see our collection of articles on UFOs in Behold I come Quickly, Book 1, pages 59-68).

A mixture of the Biblical position and the alien theory is found in the Nephilims theory, popularized by highly respected Terry James of Rapture Ready in his book, The Nephillim Imperatives. The nephillims are postulated to be descendants of the fallen angels that came to copulate with the daughters of men in the days of Noah (see Gen. 6:4). Nephilims are back in the news in the context of some ancient hieroglyphics being discovered around the world. The problem is that these evidently ancient picture-writing documents sometimes have depictions of modern devices.

In her recent article, Lyn Leahz discussed hieroglyphics decorating an Egyptian temple wall at Abydos, as depicting what appear to be modern day aircraft, helicopter and naval vessels. Sometimes, some never-yet seen designs are also depicted! See a picture here. Do all these not indicate that some advanced life-forms had once invented these devices, and the knowledge was somehow lost? (A popular theory along that line is the purported lost continent of the Atlantis!)

As plausible as these arguments may appear, CA! has reservations taking them as Gospel truth. There are certainly equally plausible explanations possible. For instance, it is evidently possible that men have visions of things to come. For example, the Prophet Nahum described an end time scenarios of "chariots" raging on broad streets, darting to and fro like torches and lightning (Nah. 2:4). Barry Smith of blessed memory pointed out that those descriptions would probably be the best description an ancient prophet can give of modern day automobiles! Say, how do we expect an OT prophet seeing a vision of Jewish exiles returning to Israel in airplanes, other than to say they were brought by some terrible big birds! Indeed Prophet Daniel was bluntly told not to bother trying to understand what he heard (and saw?) as they are only relevant and meaningful in the end times. (Dan 12:8-9). We should not be surprised if these prophets came up with pictures of aircrafts, armoured tanks, etc if asked to express what they saw pictorially!

The bottom line is this: the days described in Daniel 12: are here. Rather than start running widely on theories that have no basis, such as making plans to turn to cyborgs via implanted chips, or joining some secret cults for ephemeral power, let's be wise to our spirituality; and take appropriate actions in drawing close to the Lord. He is the One who controls all times and events. Past, present, and future (Heb 13:8).

Scotland, Britain on child protection (from p 1)

Unfortunately it is true that, resulting from the increasing end-time assaults on family life and values, some parents do turn around to seriously abuse and assault their own children. But even in these engineered environments, such cases are still by far in the minority, and could be handled by the plethora of state agencies and social services already set up to cater for children welfare. In this new proposal, every parent in Scotland is assumed irresponsible, and they have to be measured against standards and values set by the state.

Britain is set to take the matter to even a higher level. In what is being termed the “Cinderella law”, parents in the England and Wales may be jailed for up to 10 years if they are adjudged not to have shown sufficient love to their own children (<http://rt.com/news/britain-law-children-abuse-405/>). Till date, the UK has stringent laws protecting the child from physical and sexual abuse from their own parents, but the proposed new extension will address what is termed “emotional cruelty”.

As usual for such New World Order concepts, the new law is being pushed by NGOs. In their books, “emotional cruelty” is akin to Child Neglect, which is defined to include “forcing a child to witness domestic violence, scapegoating them, humiliation and degrading punishments”. It could also include “ignoring a child’s presence” and “failing to stimulate a child”. One Mr Buckland, speaking on BBC Radio 5 live, provides an apt summary of “emotional cruelty” to children: “Isolating them, belittling them, rejecting them, corrupting them, as well, into criminal or anti-social behaviour.”

The changes are due to be introduced in the UK’s Parliament within the framework of the Queen’s Speech in early June.

One doesn’t have to be a prophet to discern which groups of citizens will suffer in all these new developments. First is the poor and vulnerable parent who has to work extra hard to support the family. As it were, many are increasingly having to choose between staying at home to provide “emotional care,” or staying away (working overtime or even going abroad) in order to provide basic sustenance and physical care: food, clothing and shelter!

The other group that is bound to be hard-hit are those who advocate and/or practice traditional ideas that are increasingly now considered non-mainstream. For instance, the Mayor of London has reportedly advocated that children be taken away from parents who hold certain political views (even when those views are those of a registered political party (see <http://www.infowars.com/london-mayor-calls-for-state-to-take-children-based-on-parents-political-beliefs/>). Views on tolerance (of homosexuality for instance), inter-faithism, immigration policies and all those issues meant to promote global governance will also certainly determine who qualifies to raise a child in the emerging New World Order.

These new ideas derive directly from UNCRC (United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child). The clear end-point in view is to bring the entire mankind under one global maximum ruler – the Antichrist (see Rev. 13:16-18)

Caving In To Drugs In The New World Order

Another clear reality of how the “Hegelian approach” to changing the face of the world is being stridently applied is in the area of drug use. The role of hard drugs in degrading the mental status and quality of life of human beings is well established. Not to talk of the culpability of drugs in violence and crimes the world over. Yet the emerging attitude now is that discouraging or stopping people from taking drugs is becoming unrealistic. Instead of hitting our heads against the bricks in such “unrealistic, unprofitable ventures” therefore, the world should rather embrace legalization of drug use as the least among a number of related evils. Somehow, the reasoning goes, the world will find a way to cope with the implications of that legalization later on.

A clear leader in this school of thoughts is Portugal. After 50 years of military dictatorship, Portugal in 1974 entered a new world of unfettered liberties. One of these was increased access and liberal attitude to hard drugs. By the mid 1990’s Portugal knew it had a new problem at hand with 1% of the total population categorized as “severely drug-addicted”. In 2002, the use of drugs had become so prevalent in the country that Portugal concluded it was useless trying to prosecute people for drug use. Rather it came out with the meaningless Law 30/2000 which allows citizens to carry some arbitrarily-decided quantities of drugs (about ten days of use) on them without any fear of prosecution. Incredibly, despite evidenced increasing rot, the opinion of the “experts” promoting the policy is that “it is working!”.

In one article affirming the policy, author Wiebke Hollersen described the drug situation and attempted to justify the weird social experiment: “A drug slum formed in Lisbon, at the edge of a neighborhood known as Casal Ventoso. Here junkies slept in shacks or in the garbage, in extremely poor conditions. “They shot up on the street, and they died on the street,” Goulão says. Anyone in Portugal could observe this phenomenon -- on TV, in newspaper pictures or even from the nearby highway.....So, what to do with them but just allow them go on, seeing government can’t effectively prosecute them anyway?” (This Is Working!: Portugal, 12 Years after Decriminalizing Drugs). Goulão, quoted above, is the family medical practitioner who heads the new drug experiment, ironically described as “war on drugs”.

For all this self-deluding justification of decriminalization of drugs use in Portugal, drug use still remains officially illegal in the country - so as not to offend the UN. But it is an offence that is treated much like “a misdemeanor, much the same as a parking violation”.

But even this could change if only many more countries will officially adopt the same attitude. Hence, strident efforts are on-going worldwide (mainly in the “developed” countries, of course) to liberalize attitudes towards drug use. In Vol 8 no 1, we described the justification of religious use of hallucinogenic drugs. Later developments in the US have since seen marijuana being justified, step-wise, on the grounds of medical, recreational, and eventually now economical grounds.

Todd of Rapture Ready (Feb. 3, 2014) “laments the US drug situation:

“For years, there has been a slow creep with the introduction of medical marijuana into what is now in 21 states. Once Colorado voters decided to allow for the recreational uses of the drug, the floodgates were opened. We now have politicians openly talking about the economic benefit of making pot legal, and the media constantly reinforcing the idea that growing marijuana is no different than any other agricultural business. It should be no wonder that fifty-five-percent of Americans support national legalization of marijuana”

He further points out that the city of San Francisco has actually announced it is offering free crack pipes to heroin addicts to slow the spread of HIV. Yea, embrace the lesser of two evils, for now, and let the future take care of itself, somehow.

The situation is not much better elsewhere in the “developed” nations, with Czech republic probably rivaling the situation in Portugal. (<http://www.spiegel.de/international/europe/the-winners-and-losers-of-drug-liberalization-in-the-czech-republic-a-888618.html>). A comprehensive review can be found here (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Drug_liberalization).

This same failure mentality is widely applied in several other areas of life – as the curtain closes on the end times. For example, we have shown over the years how this attitude has been repeatedly applied in areas of human sexuality to justify immoral practices ranging from prostitution to promiscuity to paedophilia, and eventually to homosexuality.

By pushing God out of the way as a possible solution to emerging “global, modern crises”, mankind is encouraged to embrace some morality-blind alternative solutions as “lesser evils”. In short, if you can’t solve the problem, adjust to it.

The end-point in view by people deliberating promoting and nurturing these crises (and proffering their preferred solutions through their various NGOs) is to eventually remove all moral restraints in Society (in the spirit of Psalm 2:3). As they blatantly and openly write in their new age literature, this is the way to bring in the One who will take the world into the next stage in its evolutionary destiny. In actual fact, the Bible calls this man, the Man of Sin, the Antichrist.

Both God and Satan are agreed on this one point: this ungodly global leader must appear on the earth scene (Rev 17:17). He will come ahead of the Lord Jesus Christ, and will eventually be destroyed by the appearance of the Lord at His coming (2 Thess. 2:3-9).

THIMEROSAL AND AUTISM (from page 8) having a mixture of stench and salt forced down one’s throat: that is, lacing a great beneficial product with an equally damaging poison!

There is absolutely no argument as to the great havoc caused by ethyl mercury in people, as it binds to their brain resulting in a spectrum of disorders – depending on the genetic composition of those people, and other chemicals that may be present or absent in the potion. Going with the known toxicity of ethyl mercury, the US Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has set the maximum standard for exposure to mercury at 1 microgram per 10 kilogram of body weight per day. The vaccine with the least amount of Thimerosal however delivers 12,5 micrograms of mercury per dose. One has to weigh 125 kg to remain within the recommended limits for such one vaccine. According to one calculation based on the mandatory childhood vaccine schedule in the US, children received a whopping 237.5 micrograms of mercury in the first eighteen months of their lives. The figure is much higher outside the United States. (www.bolenreport.com/Mark%20Geier/unep%206.htm)

Apart from their obviously tiny body weights, infants and babies also have yet-to-be-fully-formed blood-to-brain barrier (BBB). The BBB prevents toxin such as mercury present in the blood from reaching the brain. Children are therefore in double jeopardy with respect to mercury toxicity, and its real havoc in them is therefore really yet unquantifiable! This is the plain verdict of untainted science.

Realizing this connection, virtually all the developed countries of the world, including Russia (1980), Netherlands, Denmark, all decided to ban thimerosal from their vaccines. Furthermore, following unrelenting public outcries, the United Nations Environmental Programme UNEP, Intergovernmental Negotiating Committee (UNEP/INC 5), last year (2013) had no choice other than over-rule the enormous lobbies of vested interest groups, and declare thimerosal banned in all medicines and similar products for folk use. That is all medicines, except vaccines! (see <http://www.bolenreport.com/Mark%20Geier/unep%2006.htm#sthash.uVubbG18.dpuf>)

The argument for the exemption of vaccines was that the preparation of single-dose vaccines which would not require thimerosal will push production costs beyond the pocket of many under-developed countries. In what was considered as the better of two evils, such countries are allowed to continue to receive thimerosal-laden vaccines unusable in the countries where they are produced! As it turned out, even in a country like the United States, poorer communities (read non-whites) who have to depend on National Health Insurance scheme to pay for their vaccines are also served with the mercury-containing variants of the products.

The Coalition for Mercury-free Drugs (CoMeD) has cried itself hoarse on the immorality of this situation. In an official letter to a Committee of the US Congress, chairman of CoMeD, Lisa Sykes wrote:"

"The discrepancy between the distribution of mercury-free vaccines to wealthy and predominantly Caucasian populations, while mercury-containing vaccines are distributed to poor and predominantly non-Caucasian groups is undeniable and immensely troubling.

She went on to lament:

"The double standard in vaccine safety which currently exists is unethical. The possibility that the United Nations, under the tutelage of the World Health Organization (WHO), would tolerate, or ignore, an obviously discriminatory policy based on income, nationality, and even race, is frightening,"

But all pleas and cries continue to fall on deaf ears.

Claiming to love African children too much to deprive them of the mercury-laden vaccines which are the only forms philanthropic donor-countries can afford to donate to them, the official scientific and health agencies of the world argue that, in any case, there is no "convincing" evidence that thimerosal in vaccines is linked with autism. The withdrawal of thimerosal from vaccines of the developed countries, they argue, is merely "precautionary". Such precautions however will be unwarranted for people who might end up not being able to afford the product at the end of the day. What an incredible logic!

To back up the argument that thimerosal in vaccines is not linked to autism, the latest so-called evidence cited is that in the state of California, removal of thimerosal from vaccines did not change the increasing incidents of autism within some period of time (www.ageofautism.com/2010/03/the-fallacy-of-thimerosal-removal-autism-increase-a-failure-of-science-a-bigger-failure-to-children-.html), However, not only are there glaring faults with the design of the study (acknowledged by all), other better designed studies in other places such as the state of Alabama clearly demonstrate sharp reduction in incidents of autism with withdrawal of thimerosal from vaccines. (www.ageofautism.com/2012/11/dr-david-gorski-admits-thimerosal-might-cause-autism.html).

To worsen matters, US governmental agencies were caught manipulating results from other countries, such as Denmark to alter clear evidences that the withdrawal of thimerosal from vaccines is leading to significant reduction in incidents of autism, A Danish scientist involved in the fraudulent process was subsequently dismissed from service by his University. (see www.prnewswire.com/news-releases/scandal-exposed-in-major-study-of-autism-and-mercury-132519518.html)

Why all these manipulations and denials? Ostensibly, the US government is terrified of the thousands of litigations that would surely follow, if it could be admitted that TCVs are linked with autism. For instance, in just one single case, where TCVs were implicated, the Supreme Court ordered a compensation of over $1.5 million (one and half million dollars!) to the victim. (CA! Vol 13 No 2; http://www.cbsnews.com/8301-31727_162-20015982-10391695.html).

The US government fears such rulings will easily wipe out the vaccine industry (perhaps the entire pharmaceutical industry), which would be a matter of national security in the event of biological warfare against the nation. New World Order goons must be wringing their hands in delight at the masterpiece problem they have created!

In conclusion, if Science only were the considerations, then the world should be obtaining a reprieve by now from the scourge of autism. Not only do figures from Alabama state and Denmark already cited show decrease in incidents of autism with the use of thimerosal-free vaccines, there are clear documentation of autistic children responding favourably to chelation therapy where mercury is removed from their blood. (Of course there are complications with this procedure and it cannot be generalized to all subjects. Yet that it works even if just in one instance is an irrefutable demonstration of an association between mercury and autism - see <http://sfgate.com/cgi-bin/article.cgi?f=/c/a/2005/05/25/BAGU0CU2K71.DTL>).

And then there is the so-called Amish anomaly. The religious community of Amish in Pennsylvania, USA has consistently refused vaccines over the years – for religious reasons, just as Jehovah Witnesses would not take blood transfusion. And the clear result: autism in Amish and similar communities is virtually non-existent (original reference here).

Mirrored here: www.ageofautism.com/2012/05/dan-olmsted-the-amish-all-over-again.html)

Thimerosal is clearly in the league of chemicals like lead and thalidomide in wreaking havoc on babies and infants. Lead was removed from gasoline worldwide mainly due to this hazard, while thalidomide (as mentioned by Pastor E.A. Adeboye in a recent message) was also withdrawn for the horrible deformities it produced in new borns. Yes, thimerosal-free vaccines are now in use in the developed countries, but African children continue to have thimerosal-containing versions donated to them by kind-hearted foreign philanthropists! One developing nation that has found the courage to challenge the madness is Chile, which has decided that vaccines that are not good enough for American and European children are not welcome for use in Chilean children!

What is even adding salt to the injury is that many of the vaccines are of dubious usefulness. In a previous article we have questioned the usefulness of probably the most-widely administered vaccine in Nigeria – the polio vaccine. At the instigation of Mr Bill Gates and his ilk, oral polio vaccine (not fit for use in the United States and other developed nations) are REPEATEDLY and senselessly administered (WITHOUT ANY LIMITS!) to MILLIONS of Nigerian children, just to get rid of the TWENTY or less cases of polio in the country. Meanwhile hundreds of thousands children die annually of preventable diseases such as diarrhea and malaria due to lack of proper funds or intensive campaigns. Mr Gates seek the pleasure of being credited with the total eradication of polio, which is good enough (if actually achievable, see www.ageofautism.com/2013/03/from-the-editor.html).

But at what costs to us the recipients? Even the WHO openly confesses it is going ahead with Oral polio vaccine in Nigeria only while it seeks for more reasonable, but yet unavailable, options (see www.usatoday.com/news/world/2009-08-14-nigeria-polio_N.htm).

In the meantime government and the mainstream media houses continue to sanctimoniously celebrate World Autism Day while promoting and sponsoring practices that certainly continue to stoke the raging inferno. The end-times is a truly interesting period to be on the planet, and it is only in the light of the Scriptures that we can begin to discern or make sense of happenings in the various sectors of society. CA! salutes the millions of parents who are steadfastly and lovingly supporting their autistic children and wards. We challenge the government of African countries in particular to shake off the chains of neo-colonialism and do that which is needful. To all our readers we say, Cheer up, the Redeemer is at the door!

Rabbis Seek To Build Synagogue On The Temple Mount

Prophecy Newswatch (April 1, 2014) has reported that a group of rabbis from the Israel's National Religious camp have petitioned Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu, calling for the construction of a synagogue on Israel's holiest site, the Temple Mount. Rabbis represented in the petition were from a broad spectrum including conservatives, liberals and Religious Zionists. Also represented were professors, educators and other professionals.

Officially, the chief Rabbi of Jerusalem cautions Jews from going up the Temple Mount as they could inadvertently trod through the Holy of Holies region of the previous Temple, which Judaism still considers sacred. This is much welcome by the Arabs who would rather Jews stayed away from the Mount, lest they should start dreaming of re-erecting the Temple again. Currently, the Dome of the Rock (the 2nd most holy Mosque in Islam) stands on the Temple mount, and any dream of the fourth Jewish Temple doesn't look like good news for the Mosque!

In his book, Appointment in Jerusalem, Derek Prince gave an interesting interpretation of Rev. 11:2 suggesting that both the Mosque and the Temple can indeed co-exist on the Temple Mount. Derek Prince believes the current Mosque is actually standing on the Outer Court region which will remain given to the gentiles. It doesn't therefore need to be moved, for the new Jewish Temple to be built in the adjoining original place meant for it! Groups like the Temple Institute are already preparing materials that they believe will be used for actual worship and service in the Temple soon to be built!

One of the ways the Antichrist will ingratiate himself to the Jews will be by giving them the Temple on Mount Moriah again. His desecration of the Temple 3 ½ years into his tenure will reveal him to the Jews as the antichrist. (see Mat. 24:15, Daniel 9:27, 11:31)

TOPICAL ISSUE: World marks Autism day, but Third World countries continue to serve as dumping grounds for a major possible promoter for Autism: Thimerosal-Containing Vaccines unwanted elsewhere!

Wednesday 2nd of April was observed all over the world as World Autism Awareness Day. Sadly, it is not likely there would soon be a scientific consensus on what exactly are those factors responsible for the horrible disease called autism. Ordinarily, it shouldn't have been such a difficult task – if it is only science that is involved. Afterall, here is a disease that literally sprung up from nowhere – from near zero-incidence a few decades ago to now millions of sufferers globally. Surely it must have something to do with something we started doing during that period of time!

Unfortunately, it is more than science that is involved. In particular, big money, power and politics also come into play. And just like politicians see the lives of innocent citizens as mere inevitable collateral damage in the battle for the next elections; for the big brains behind Thimerosal-Containing-Vaccines, - globalists and agents of the New World Order - life is all about “survival-of-the-fittest”.

Yes, concerning autism, the raw, unprocessed facts speak, nay scream, for themselves. Consider the following, with respect to the possible role of the chemical thimerosal in the development of autism. By the way, Thimerosal (or thiomersal, in UK and Australia), is a chemical containing 49.55% of ethyl mercury and is used to preserve several types of vaccines so that multiple doses could be extracted from one vial without fear of contamination. It is the classical case depicted in the African proverb which speaks of → page 5

EXHORTATION: The Convergence

A convergence is a coming together of many things and in this context, a coming together of last days' signs the Bible told us to watch for. These signs are exploding. We don't just watch them; now we almost feel them. Here's a sample:

The "days of Noah" similarities have never been stronger. Corruption and violence characterized times then and now. There was genetic manipulation then and now. There was a preaching of the truth that was ignored. A decline in man's character was dramatic then and now. Earthly pleasures were all that mattered.Mt. 24

Russia and Vladimir Putin are rising and Gog from the land of Magog may be stirring. We don't know for sure that Putin is Gog, but he is Gog-esque. He's a Czar wannabe and a tyrant and he will likely not stop with Crimea or Ukraine. (Ezekiel 38-39)

Other than at her birth on May 14, 1948, Israel's modern-day significance has never been so significant. She is the center of the earth in so many ways: Politically, spiritually, geographically. Middle East tension or peace depends on her activity and choices. She could strike Iran any day and the entire globe would be destabilized. (Ezekiel 36-39)

Technology is raging and that needs to happen for the Antichrist system to be installed. From "chip" technology to a cashless society, technology is racing and on fast-forward like never before. The "increase of knowledge" foretold in Daniel 12 is most prominent in the world of technology. The Antichrist system will be waiting for him to tap into. (Rev. 13, 17; Daniel 12)

Many are talking favorably about a one-world religion. Tony Blair has stated that he will spend the rest of his life pushing for this. The heads of many faiths see ecumenism as positive now. (Rev. 13, 17)

Apostasy is rising. Deception is the order of the day. While some claim there is yet to be a great revival, the Bible indicates that will next come in the Tribulation. Some of our most respected Christian leaders are being deceived. (Matthew. 14; II Thess. 2; I Tim 4)

The occult is soaring and much of it is drug-related as predicted. Witchcraft has never been so popular. The occult is normalized in the world and even the church.

There are "signs in the Heavens." We had the prominent Comet Ison in 2013 and we have blood moons coming in 2014 and 2015. (Luke 21; Joel 2)

Global instability is leading to much discussion about global government. Not one government anywhere works very well. Satan is stirring the pot everywhere. Global problems require global solutions. Most believe we are just one crisis away from global government. (Revelation 13)

I could go on but you get the point! This "convergence" is unprecedented. It has never happened before with this intensity. Don't let our times get you down. Look up. He is coming soon.
